The Lied Center for Real Estate is committed to the growth and advancement of future professionals in the field. The Lied Institute's Mentorship Program offers a unique opportunity to guide interested students toward careers in real estate, and who are eager to know about different aspects of the profession. The program helps students in gaining an inside view of commercial real estate and engages them with the real estate professions in this sector.

Students participating in the Mentorship Program are more likely to get internship positions, which often lead to full-time job placements.

Students benefit from the "real world" experience of a working real estate professional. Students also gain a new awareness of their strengths within the workplace.

How Does It Work?

For one semester, a mentor is paired with a UNLV student who has expressed an interest in a mentor's professional area. Students are expected to learn what their mentor's job entails, enabling them to be better prepared in making decisions about future employment in the field of real estate. Further, students are expected to use this program to enhance their in-class learning experiences with their mentor's day-to-day operations.
